THE OFFICE FOR VETERANS' AFFAIRS

At the heart of government

My ambition here is very simple:
I want to make the UK the best place in the world to be a veteran.

I visit our Armed Forces as often as I can – in Catterick Garrison in my constituency, around the country and overseas – and I know that these courageous men and women represent the very best of our country. They deserve our full support to thrive in civilian life and to continue contributing their incredible skills to the prosperity of our country. I'm proud that through the Office for Veterans' Affairs and a dedicated Veterans' Minister in Cabinet, we are doing more than ever before to make this ambition a reality.

ABOUT THE OFFICE FOR VETERANS' AFFAIRS

We lead UK government efforts to make sure the UK is the best place in the world to be a veteran, helping the nation fulfil its duty to people who have served in the armed forces.

The Office for Veterans' Affairs (OVA) is a part of the Cabinet Office, which sits at the heart of government. Work supporting veterans is the responsibility of the whole of government, and this central position for the OVA enables us to co-ordinate functions that work to ensure the best support for veterans and their families.

The Minister for Veterans' Affairs attends Cabinet. This ensures that veterans' interests are championed at the top table among those leading our country and making the decisions that affect people's daily lives.

Although veterans share the experience of having served in the armed forces, they are civilians, needing access to civilian support and contributing to the life of our whole society.

From the heart of the UK government, we work with devolved administrations in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, local government, charities and businesses to help veterans when they need it and enabling them to continue to make brilliant contributions to society after leaving the armed forces.
